Robata and sushi with unobstructed ocean views

Dining with an unobstructed view of the ocean is harder to come by in South Florida than you'd think. But the best new place to do it this year is at the Hyde Resort, where Rainer Becker of Zuma fame has brought his robata-and-sushi game to the sand. With the cool breeze blowing off the ocean, enjoy an old fashioned made with Japanese whiskey and the black kampachi with truffle to start. Then pick from the long list of grilled meats, cooked on a giant robata grill that dominates the inside part of the restaurant. You can't go wrong with filet mignon by the sea, but if you've got an herbivore among you the grilled corn is a surprising highlight.
